Drip and Sprinkler Irrigation under the Per Drop More Crop (PDMC) Scheme: A Sustainable Water Management Model for the Global South

Dr. SS Reddy, Advisor - Agriculture, DAKSHIN, RIS

Water scarcity and erratic rainfall patterns continue to challenge agricultural productivity across the Global South. Efficient water management is essential to ensure climate-resilient agriculture and sustainable food security. Recognizing this need, India has successfully implemented the Per Drop More Crop (PDMC) scheme under the Pradhan Mantri Krishi Sinchayee Yojana (PMKSY-Prime Minister's Agricultural Irrigation Scheme) since 2015-16. This initiative promotes micro-irrigation technologies such as drip and sprinkler irrigation which enhance water-use efficiency, optimize farm productivity, and ensure long-term sustainability in water-scarce regions.
